

Digital Scholarship on Your Campus

Benjamin Wiggins, Ph.D.

This morning's schedule

- 9:15-10:00: Icebreaker
- 10:00-10:30: Homework reflection
- 10:30-10:45: Break
- 10:45-11:15: Collaborative redesigns
- 11:15-11:30: Common themes
- 11:30-11:45: Break
- 11:45-12:30: Group presentations

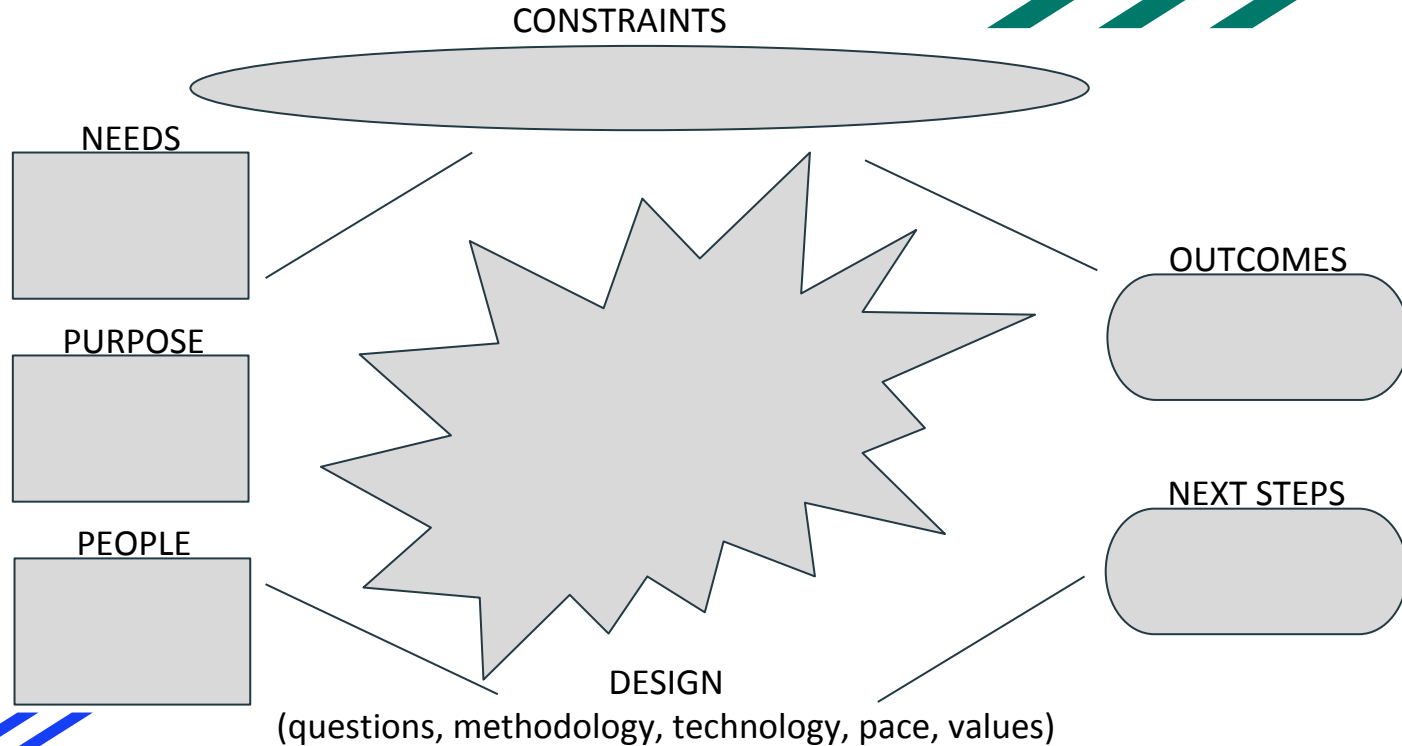

Get out your daubers...

... 'cause we're playing BINGO!

Homework reflection

1. Assemble into six groups of five
2. Each group member should take six minutes to summarize the findings of their homework, presenting:
  - a. How you currently foster or hope to foster digital scholarship at your institution
  - b. Your summary of a digital project based on an interview with its lead
  - c. Your assessment of that project's successes and challenges
3. While your partners present, listen and write post-its that capture the project's:
  - a. Needs, purpose, people, constraints, design, outcomes, and next steps

Listen for:

Collaborative redesigns

- For the first two minutes, the presenter should outline their and their interviewee's recommendations for how the project could have addressed its challenges
  - The group should listen and add post its to needs, design, etc.
- For the next four minutes, the group should contribute their own recommendations for how the project could have addressed its challenges
  - The original presenter should listen and add post its to needs, design, etc.

Recommend changes to:

Common themes

- Look at all five sheets and find the commonality in the needs, purpose, people, constraints, design, outcomes, and next steps
- Categorize these common themes and draft a new project sheet that presents your group's findings

Our common ground:

Acknowledgements

Kim Hoffman and Anna Kijas were instrumental in the design of this workshop. My sincere thanks to each of them.

Activities were based on the “Designing Wiser” curriculum of the Art of Hosting, CC BY-NC 3.0 content.